State Representative, 5th District (R)

"People ask me why I would consider getting into the messy business of politics. The answer is quite simple – our kids. The children of Washington State deserve a bright future with a strong economy. We owe them a world-class education that will prepare them for that future. And, we should leave them a clean environment to enjoy. I believe, working together, we can achieve all that."

MEET CHAD MAGENDANZ

Community and education leader, Chad Magendanz is running to fill the seat to be vacated by Rep. Glenn Anderson. He's well regarded as the president of the Issaquah School Board and is an outspoken proponent of both education reform and fiscal responsibility.

A former Navy submarine officer and program manager at Microsoft, Chad holds a degree from Cornell University in Electrical Engineering. He currently works as a design consultant to Nike, Panasonic, Microsoft and other high tech companies in the Northwest.

Having lived on Tiger Mtn. in Issaquah for 17 years, Chad and his wife Galen now have two teenage boys. An avid outdoorsman, cyclist and triathlete, he's a Kiwanis member, precinct committee officer, PTA legislative representative and classroom volunteer.

EDUCATION: The Issaquah School District has achieved the highest rating for education investment – student achievement for dollar spent. With the lowest admin overhead in King County and the best credit rating in the state, we've shown we can make every dollar count. We owe it to our children to do more with our limited resources and embrace new methods and technologies to prepare them for the 21st century.

ECONOMY: Many in the 5th District were dealt a crippling blow from the economic downturn. We need a representative in Olympia who can show fiscal responsibility and reduce spending...just as we're all now doing in our homes and small businesses. A budgeting process based on priorities of government instead of gimmicks will help restore meaningful economic growth and stability.
